

PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSESSMENT

FOR CHILDREN & ADOLESCENTS

Helping Children and Adolescents, Achieve Greater Academic Success and Improved Self-Esteem and Well-Being

IS YOUR CHILD
LIVING UP TO HIS OR HER
FULL POTENTIAL?

Psychological assessments are beneficial in helping parents, teachers, and mental health professionals obtain a clearer understanding of a child's intellectual, academic, and emotional functioning. This knowledge is then used to develop a treatment plan to help the child achieve greater academic and interpersonal success.

A psychological assessment may be appropriate if your child is:

- ❖ Gifted and would like to participate in more advanced classes.
 - ❖ Having ongoing academic and behavioral problems at school and at home.
 - ❖ Having trouble finishing in-class assignments or homework, and is inattentive, distractible, and/or hyperactive.
 - ❖ Combative, oppositional, and does not get along with others, or maybe he or she is aloof and alone most of the day.
- OR
- ❖ Many attempts have been made to assist the child, which have not been successful.

What is the assessment process like...

Our assessments include:

- ❖ The intake process, which includes meeting with the parents or guardians to obtain information on the child, the family, the history of difficulties, and performance.
- ❖ The evaluation will depend on the needs of the child and the questions to be addressed. Testing may include, evaluating current cognitive functioning and academic performance; as well as utilizing tests to evaluate attention and concentration, and emotional and social functioning.
- ❖ After the evaluation is complete, a detailed report will be written with recommendations for school and home.
- ❖ Finally, there will be a personal feedback session with the doctor.
